Saturday, August 10	10:30:00 PM	12:00:00 AM	Panel Room 1	Femininity in Marvel's Cinematic Universe	Marie Poulter	Panel	For all that Marvel's female characters are strong, feminine and wear tight clothes, their attitudes and behaviours are more traditional, supportive and subservient than would be expected from a female character in 2018. This panel will examine Pepper Potts, Dr. Jane Foster, Valkyrie, Wanda, and, especially, Natasha Romanoff and her troublesome story arc. The panel will also cover the multiple strong female characters of Black Panther and their strong feminist roots. We will also discuss "dead bisexual women" in superhero films. This panel will cover up until Endgame and will mainly focus on the cinematic universe; the open discussion can be extended to the TV and comics universes.

We take a quick look at the history of comedy as a whole and follow it up with various examples from anime to stand up to the Office. If that's not enough, come to the only panel in the United States that will diligently explain the similarities between "Everybody Loves Raymond" and "One Punch Man".
Sunday, August 11	12:00:00 AM	1:00:00 AM	Panel Room 1	Popular Tropes in Yaoi/Yuri Fanfiction (18+)	Marie Poulter	Panel	This panel will explore popular tropes in fanfiction from the Geocities days to today including Lemon, slash, soulbonds, TIM's EvilReleena, 172, colourblindness, Words, futaba/extra/special, "dead dove", alpha/beta/omega, Vampires, AU, etc.. This panel will look at how these themes and tropes have changed and grown over time; like anything else, fanfiction has trends and fads that are sometimes more universal and are sometimes limited to specific genres and fandoms. Through analysing these trends, we can see how the writers are relating to each other and other media. Most tellingly, several of these trends are nearly-exclusive to fan culture. By tracking and understanding tropes in fanfiction, we can see how the writers relate to fan culture. While this panel is labelled Yaoi/Yuri, some of these can be related to het fanfiction as well.
